ABSTRACT:

Why and how did a key university in Hong Kong select, design, and implement an academic, structured community of practice (CoP) approach to address local and international challenges in higher education? What research informed these actions? Today we recognize and honor the scholarship--the published research--that these CoPs have contributed to higher education. And importantly, we will discuss what CoP research questions and applications challenge our next steps. Today our opportunities with respect to CoPs include additional analysis of their outcomes, international relationships, expansion of applications, and leadership of the CoP movement in Asia.
