Session 1: Service-Learning 101

Tuesday, 26 November 2013, 10:30 a.m. – 12:00 noon, in ACC209

Abstract

Service learning provides students with opportunities to enhance their learning experiences outside the classroom through participation in various community service activities. This form of experiential learning is in line with the educational philosophy of the university in which I work. A brief overview on the definition of service learning and high-impact educational practices will be given in this lecture. We shall also discuss the differences amongst volunteerism, community services and service learning, and the essential elements of effective service-learning practice. Finally, the benefits of service-learning will be discussed, with a Q & A session concluding the lecture.

Session 2: Hands-On Service Learning Programme Design

Thursday, 28 November 2013, 2:00 – 5:00 p.m., in ACC209

Abstract

After the overview of the characteristics of service learning discussed in the last session, this workshop aims to help participants become familiar with the types of service learning programme, as well as develop different strategies for designing potentially high-impact service learning programmes. We shall also deliberate on how to use a model to plan a curriculum-based service-learning activity in this session. In this workshop, colleagues are welcome to share their experiences in running their own service learning activities and pose any questions regarding service learning programme.
