📄 Abstract

The last workshop offered in October 2015 provided a good introduction of how the Hong Kong education system supports students with special educational needs (SSEN) and the strategies for assisting students with visual and hearing impairment in learning. In view of the high demand for similar sharing sessions, this workshop will provide a brief overview of different types of SSEN, followed by in-depth discussion on the teaching strategies to support students with Autistic Spectrum Disorder (E.g. Asperger Syndrome), Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD). Local and overseas examples will be used to illustrate how the support services could be taken as references.
